This research aims to explore the representation of postcolonial forms in the novel "Bumi Human" by Pramoedya Ananta Toer. This novel, set in the Dutch colonial era in Indonesia, is an opportunity to investigate how postcolonial themes are depicted. This research will focus on analyzing the narrative structure, character development, and cultural elements used in the novel to represent the postcolonial experience of Indonesian society.

The aim of this research is to determine the postcolonial form of the indigenous population, to explore the dynamics of colonial power and the power of the indigenous population, as well as the position of the indigenous population. Referring to postcolonial literary theory, such as "Orientalism" by Edward Said, this research will use a content analysis approach. Certain quotes and dialogues will be examined to identify postcolonial representations in this novel.

This research will contribute to the understanding of Indonesian literature and the importance of Pramoedya Ananta Toer's works. By uncovering postcolonial elements in "Human Earth," this research aims to provide valuable insights into Indonesia's colonial history and its relevance to contemporary postcolonial discourse.
