

ABSTRACT

Planting Character Education for MA Al-Amien Jambu students through Morning Apple Activities

Keywords: Character Education, Habituation, Morning Apple

Character education is the most important foundation for a nation in shaping the character of a child's soul, both physically and mentally. Therefore, in shaping character education, it is necessary to have good and synergistic management in various components of education that can be involved both formally, non-formally and informally in schools, family and community circles.

The purpose of this study was to determine the form of character education planting and how the influence of the application of character education through morning apple activities at MA Al-Amien Jambu. The type of research used in this study is a qualitative method with a descriptive approach, data collection is observation, interviews and documentation.

The results of this study found that from the morning assembly activities which were carried out every day, students had discipline, religious attitudes, and social care. This can be seen from the better student morals, in terms of discipline in participating in activities that have been programmed at the madrasa, dressing neatly and covering their genitals, being responsible and having a leadership spirit in leading morning mass activities. The inculcation of character education carried out at MA Al-amien Jambu has several research implications including the formation of spiritual and social attitudes towards students.